Batterers Will Kill

Intimate partner homicide is a far too common outcome of domestic violence. Often the warning signs are unknown, ignored, or not taken seriously. This gripping new video, Batterers Will Kill, was created to help both domestic violence survivors and a broad range of service providers about lethality indicators and to help prevent intimate partner homicide. Through the stories of three families devastated by homicide, this program highlights the warning signs and abuse that can escalate to murder.

The stories of these three families reveal the horror of domestic violence and the devastating impact it has on children and other family members.

Batterers Will Kill also includes an interview with a convicted murderer who met his wife while on duty in the military. His disturbing testimony reveals how he viewed his relationship with his wife, why he says he killed her and the permanent effect it has had on his young son. Professionals in this video emphasize the importance of recognizing the warning signs of intimate partner violence, reinforce the need for safety planning, and explain how a comprehensive community response to domestic violence can help reduce these murders. This compelling video will help victims of abuse, social service providers, health care professionals, clergy, law enforcement, and other professionals recognize the warning signs that exist prior to the occurrence of homicide.
